SCOTTISH LETTER.

(From our own Correspondent.) EDINBURGH, February 27.

COMMONPLACE BOOMS OF BORBET BURNS. For the second time, two alleged of Com mouplace books of Robers Purns" been exposed in Edinburgh "by public rocp." Twenty seven years ago the Scottish book world was greatly excited by the amnouncement that at the sale of Mackenzie, of Mauchline." The name of this Land domark the boundary between Bolivia of Burby poetry and prose; he attended surgeon in Aberdeen Royal Infirmary. Mr William Burness in his last illness married one of the "belles of Manchana" and was " Common Sense" of "The Holy Fair." No information was given as to how the commonpiece books came into the possession of Dr.Mackenzie; but in each of them there was a note to the effect that " is believed the contents are unpublished. Before a crowded house, and amid intense excitament, the volumes were exchanged for many times their weight in gold; for 310 and 270 guiness respectively, One was Ye dour suld deevil, ilks time I see purchased by Sir Robert Jardine of Castlemilk and the other by Lord Rosebery. Only a few days after this sale in 1886, it was proved beyond a shadow of doubt that most, if not all, the pieces contained in the books were not the composition of Robert Burns, that they had been copied from the pages of the "Scots

Magazine" and the "London Magazine." As a consequence, the two purchasers returned the books to the sellers and had their money refunded. Last week the books again appeared in an Edinburgh But, man, the we ye hit the basa treat! auction room, to become the property of "him who bids the most;" but they only Ye've aye dune something. Gude appeared as "commonplace books containing 142 pages of manuscript in the hand writing of the poet," and realised £65 each. A controversy has arisen a regular paper war," as to the authenticity of the two looks. Most of the authorities are SATURDAY, APRIL 67H, 5 o'clock after an examination of the paper, the spelling, and the handwriting, that they 354 were not written by Robert Burns." One of these specialists states that the largest of the volumes calls itself "A Few Miscel | There's two new drivers that I bocht for celanies in proce and verse Designed for the Amusement of a Young Lady, by hand she well knows who beggs her acceptance;" and argues, can anything more unlike Burns' style or spelling be fancied than the title of this volume? The contents, of the books are chiefly of a religious character, with a few pieces of sentimental poetry thrown in. Burns, he says, knew much better ways of amusing "some dainty fair one "than by transcribing "theologic ware" for her perusal. The dates upon the books, also, -1781 and 1784, -are against the theory that they were Burns work. Is it to be believed that Burns, in his twenty-sixth year, with his wonderful gift of composition, set himself deliberately to copy from odd magazines 142 pages of religious essays and poetry? And in 1784too, one of his buriest years: the year of his father's death, of the removal of the family from Lochlen to Mossgiel, and of

The occasion is supposed to be the introduction of a Liberal Finance Bill whose only granting the letter did not axond the feature is the repeal of the license duty on dogs. His Lordship treats this as a Bill of enormous importance. It brings before behalf of the pursuer company now, and his eyes "the vision of an England covered with litters next year, covered with packs as to the division and apportionment. of grown and voracious hounds the year after. SCOTTISH LETTER.

(From Our Own Correspondent). EDINBURAN, February, 27.

A LOVELY MISQUOTATION. An English newspaper is responsible for Burns "howler" of siceeding precious ness. A looturer quoted the lines-What though on hamely fare we dine Wear hodden grey and a' that.

They appeared in this form-What though on homely fare we dine,... We're Nodding Gray and a' that. The reporter had avidently taken some pains with his work, or he could never have mixed "We're a' Noddin " with " Duncan Gray" in this attempt to deal with a quotation from an alien tongue.

COYEUANT SUNDAY! "Covenant Sunday" was celebrated New Greyfriam Church, Edinburgh, and

Sir Andrew Erasar, K.C.S.L. took part in the services. A notable feature was the singing of Pealms which possess Covenanting associations to old, familiar Scottish tunes. In Greyfriars Churchyard many the Covenanters are buried, and on the famous monument there was placed beautiful wreath inscribed, "In Momor of Women of the Covenant from Women of

New Greyfriars." Colonel Milne, Chairman of the Clyde Sailing Shipowners' Association, believes that, considering the increased coat of run-38 ning steamers, sailing ships will be able to command employment on more remunerative terms than in recent years, and that for the next year or two at any rate, they will obtain considerably enhanced freight.

The probability is that none of the Dundec whaling yessels will go to the fishing this year; of late the experience of the companies has been described as "zuinous." Mr Edmund Taylor Whittaker, Royal Astronomer of Ireland, has been elected to the Chair of Mathematics in the University of Edinburgh, vacant by the death of Professor Chrystal. The University of Aberdeen will confer the degree of LL.D. upon Sir Alexander Hosie, Consul-General, Tientain.

At St John's Church, Dumfries, Edward Ritchie Morries, of Shanghai, to Mary Forrester, third daughter of J. Portune, of Bengairn, Kirkeudbrightshire.

James Noble Adam, an American Scot amous as a municipal reformer, an ex-Mayor of Buffalo, U.S.A. His body was brought to Edinburgh and buried in St.

"Born. in 1815, she went to work in a cost-mine when mine years old; carried the coal to the pit-head by means of a creel or bag suspended on her back from a leather band until 1843, when an Act of Parliament prohibited females working underground

THE MARRIAGE SERVICE.

Reform Suggestions Adopted by Convocation.

The marriage service came up for discussion in the Lower House of the Convocation of Canterbury, which opened at Westminster on February 15. The House agreed to the revision in the following form of the collect concerning children: "Bestow, we beseech Thee, upon these two persons the heritage and gift of children. The Dean of Winchester said there was a feeling against the wording of the collect, It was rather out spoken for the present time, and the committee had provided a beautiful equivalent.

The Dean of Winchester next moved Patroclus, L. Spore H. March 18. that the last exhortation (which refers to the wife's obedience and subjection to her husband) be revised. Many passages in Scripture, be said, might be more happily chosen for bringing out the wife's duties to her husband. A great deal of the language of St. Paul and St. Peter, referring to the wife, had altered in eighteen countries. The Dean of Canterbury, who objected, said they were asked to say that the views of the Apostios regarding the two seres Atreus, L. H.K. H. March 19. were wrong. That was a somewhat alarming and distressing principle to introduce into their deliberations. An amendment was carried which secures that, while the exhortation may be revised, its scriptural form and substance will be retained

WHERE VARUS SUFFERED DEFEAT.

A sensation has been caused in selentific circles in Germany by the rosult of excavations inaugurated by the Housening Association of the Westphalian district of Sauerland The object was to find the place where the Roman legions under Varus were defeated in 9 A. D. by the Toutous under Arminius. As by this battle the advance of the Roman Empire was arrested, it is a landmark in universal history,

The monument erected near Detmold 1870 years later in memory of the victory does not cover the site of the encounter; it lies many miles west of it.. There was a great variety of opinions about the real site. Mommson was in favour of Barenau, where an unusually large amount of Roman coins had been dug up; but his argumenta were by no means conclusive. Nota few learned men, among them also Professor Kopp of Munster University, decided. long ago that there was no possibility of arriving at any definite conclusion about this topographical problem. But by these excavations the whole question has taken a new turn. In the Arnsberg forest, south of the city of Arnsberg, a cometery a mile in length and two-thirds of a mile in width was laid bare. Altogother 600 graves have been discovered, but it is quite safe to assert that at least a thousand people have been buried there.

But the most surprising feature was that these graves were so regularly arranged that they must have been chosen at one and the same time. Moreover, every tomb consisted of a heap of loose stones piled up over the dead body, and-most remarkable -not a single bone was found. All these strange circumstances are well explained by the historical notice that Germanicus, six years after the battle, collected the remains of his slain comrades and buried. them on the spot. As they had been exposed for six years to the open air and the animals, of course he had only dry bones to cover and that he did by piling up stones over each carcase. The rain got through these porous dolmens and gradually. dissolved the bones into atoms, so that no complete skeleton could now be found. Nor was any wespon or metal utensil found, because these things were too valuable for the "ancient Germans to leave with the dead bodies after the massacre.

The site of these finds quite explains the disaster that befell the Roman legions. dike had been built through the awamps of the Arnsberg forest and well paved as a military road. For the Teutons it was easy to block the road in this neighbourhood and waylay the legions, who could not move over the swamps. Furthermore, there is an old place called Teutonburg and a river Teut close by. Thus by the name Teutopburg forest we may well understand the Arnsberg forest. The site of Alise Castle is thereby settled to be much farther to the west than was formerly believed. Al topographic I difficulties disappear if we interpret the celebrated passages without projudice for any other locality. We learn at the same time that the Romans did not advance as far into the interior of Germany as was formerly believed. They met their defeat near the banks of the upper Ruhr is positive evidence that your Digistion is at fault. Indigestion leads to debility, inefficiency; a general loss of montal and physical force, as well as a bost of aches and ills which make life not worth the living. In all probability you already know this from unhappy experience, and have been vainly seeking relief. If so, it is for your benefit and guidance that Mr. A. J. F. Klomponhouwer, of the Notherlands India. Cavalry, now stationed at Batavia, Java, recently related the facts of his own case.

"Indigestion troubled me some eighteen months ago," said Mr Klomponhouwer. " I had nasty pains about the pit of my stomach, and a feeling of uncomfortable fulness after meals although I could eat but little. Severe headaches and attacks of dizziness were frequent, and through being unable to sleep properly I arose in the morning feeling worn out and unfit for duty. Constipation, sharp shooting pains across the shoulders, slarming palpitations, and breathlessness after any unusual exertion increased my discomfort.

"I was under medical treatment for months, and at the same time lived upon specially prepared foods, but did not improve. It was not until I tried Dr. Williams Pink Pills for Pale People that my condition began to mend. After a course of these Pills I found myself possessed of a fine appetite, able to sleep well, and entirely free from those pains which the dyspeptic suffers. At present I am as well and strong as could be wished. The rich red blood which Dr. Williams. Pink Pills supply at every dose builds up the nerves and revitalises every organ of the body. THE STEWART CASE.

Strange Revelations by the Principal Witness.

long interview with Rue, the Belgian, who that I could not possibly live on the was the principal witness against Mr money." Bertrand Stewart, the London Jowyer, at . his secret trial in Leipzig.

He owns, in a word, that he betrayed Mr Stewart for German gold. In 1907. when about 45, he was at Hamburg as export agent for an English firm. In November of that year, he states, a member of the firm wrote him a letter proposing that he should enter the employ of the Intelligence Department of the British War Office. Here is the letter as printed in English alongside the German translation of the Hamburger Nachrichlen:-

Private and Confidential. Dear Mr Rue,-I am writing to you on | collect information about the defences. BRANCHES: Singapore, Penang, quite a private matter which has nothing of ships, railway arrangements, movements of troops, etc., for which remuneration

> I have teen asked whether I know of man in the North of Europe who would be willing to get this information when required. I am given to understand that it would not commit you to anything, and you would only be offered this employment if necessity arose. I am therefore writing to ask you whether jou would care to have your name entered on the Intelligence List of those in the employ of the War Office and to undertake to give the best information you could when required.

Of course, this is strictly private; and you must not talk of it to anyone. I have confidence in you, or I should never have then ten pounds from the English saked you. You can decide as you like. eannot say what the remuneration is, but travelling about as you do, and having so many English interests, I thought you might care to go in for this, as it would not interfere with your work. If you sgree ... £1,200,000 | accept, I will get your name entered at the ... 21,525,000 | War Office, If you do not care to, no barm is done; but I depend upon you not to talk PRINTERS Yours sincerely.

COUNTER-ESPIDIFICIA. In the following January, so Rue declares, he went to London, and his correspondent took him to the War Office. where he introduced him to a certain honesty of the High Court at Leipzig, but Hole, Vallow, -Wong Sin major, who passed him on to another officer. and he was finally engaged at a mainty of 2250 Ta Year as a spy. His Convious apparently? were not mercons, sor up till 1910 be states that the chief news he communicated was political though why the War Office paid such a salary for nows of German politics he does not explain: In April 1910, the firm by whish he was coployed discorded him without scoors ing him any reason, and, he alleges, turned him into the street wilhout beying the mary due to him. Besides these proceed. ings-certainly hardly characteristic o English business methods the director told him be would have good care be lost his work for the Rootish Intelligence Derastment Action as we are evidently to secure it. "I placed myself," he states, in communication with an agent in Brussels, who engaged me for German counter espionage, but I kept in touch with the English Intelligence D partment and received from it in 1910 and 1911 The Hamburger Nachrichten contains a orders for which I was so miserably paid

> REASONS FOR BETRAYAL On July 30, 1911, states Rue, when he was living in Holland, an Englishman came with a message from the chief of the English Intelligence Department and gave him £15, which be stated he had received from the department. This Englishman, whom Rue says he discovered later was Mr Bertrand Stewart, proposed that they should travel and gather information, visiting Bremen, Bremerhaven, Wilhelmshaven, Capons, Large, Small, Sin Kai ... Cuxhaven, Wangeroog, Hamberg, Berkum, and Kiel. Next day they set out for Bre- Doves, -- Pan Kau men, where Mr. Stewart remained, while his companion went to Wilhelmshaven to | Eggs. Hen-Kai Tan ...

Here Rue gives the German journalist his Shanghai, Rangoon, Samarang, Sourabaya, to do with business. As you probably reasons for betraying Mr Stwart, "I am know, I meet all sorts of people in Govern- no Englishman; I have, therefore, no duty ment employ here and friends at the War to that country. As I have said, I have Office: The Intelligence Department of been in more than one case very heally the War Office have a list of individuals in breated by the English. In contrast to their employ abroad who give them various to this I have been treated quite differ. Hare, Shanghai, Tu Chaiinformation as to naval and military matters ently in Germany, better and more Partidge, Che Khoo in connection with harbour works, number honourably. It was, therefore my duty to do whatever was in my power to put Germany on her guard against systematic English espionage. Therefore I only did my duty, knowing Stewart to be a spy, to let him be captured at Bromen.

The interviewer of the Hamburger Nachrichten asked him if he really believed that Mr Stewart was guilty, and Rue proceeded to enumerate the points against him, doubtless made during the trial at Leipzig, of which Rue declined to speak. These points were :--

L Stewart came to him in Holland, although only the English Intelligence Department know his (Rue's) address. When he came he concessed his Intelligence Department, for which receipts were given and sent by the former address of the head of the Intelligence Department in London. 5. Whilst in Biemen Mr Stewart stayed at an obscure hotel 6. Mr Stewart fold him he was in Germany as agent for a nabent. Rue ends by saying that when foreign Cuttle Fish, Mak Yu newspapers call him an agent-prove Dab,—Sa Mang Yu cateur, they are lying. On his own showing, however, Rue was prepared to sell Dace,-Wong Mei Lan himself to the highest bidder. His hope of livelihood depended on the favour of the Dog Fish Tit Tu Se German authorities, whom he possibly Reis Congor, Hol Mann thought would be gratified at the conviction of Mr. Stewart. Encouraged by the way in which all their demands have hitherto been conceded, the Labourites have naturally asked for more and more, for the appetite grows with it opportunities. Last summer during the great railway strike it was noticeable how cheaply the leaders, as well as the rank and file of the strikers, held the Government: they imagined that they had it in the hollow of their hand, and so were most unaffectedly chagrined when very unexpectedly the authorities called in the military to preserve order. and help to keep open the main lines of communication. And they still look upon the Government as their docile servants. But the most interesting feature of the present crisis is the dramatic reappearance in the political arena of Mr A. J. BALFOUR. wers led to suppose that there would be regretful termination. But the club has emerged from temporary retirement to win fresh and greater laurels, and it is to hoped that it will continue in its delight ful work. In selecting Gilbert Sullivan's "The Gondoliers" diverse opinions were expressed as to the possibility of the Club being a little too ambitious, for this bright and fascinting opera certainly calls for much skill and patient attention in order that it may be satisfactorily given. Those, however, who had the opportunity of visiting the Theatre Royal on the opening night of its presentation make their good names known historically. to the public could not only have been impressed with the manner in which it was A Chinese jumped from the verandah handled but could not have failed to have come to the conclusion that its selection

To Mr Denman Fuller F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., must be given praise in working up the Choruses, into the singing of which was imported the necessary date:briskness while it was very tuneful. The acting, for the most part, did the performers credit, but it was by no means over-done, nor were many of the humorous portions unduly emphasized. This was noticeable more at the beginning. but there was a great improvement as the artistes warmed up to their work. The performers were much aided by the sympathetic accompaniment of the orchestra, the music for whom was orchestrated by Mr Denman Fuller. Miss E. Benbow Rowe made an admirable Duchess of Plaza-Toro and imparted the necessary support to the Duke. "Her daughter " (Mrs A. Schofield) delighted the company by her charming style and polished inging; also when associated with her husband ("Luiz") the audience were provided with rich musical treats. some of which had to be repeated in order to meet the desires of those present. yesterday decided to insist upon drastic amendments to the Coul Mines Bill. This, together with the new attitude of the Opposition, is expected to prolong the proceedings over the Bill.

GOVERNMENT DOWNFALL FORECASTED.

It is recognised that the position of wage bill and tried to pass this colossal the Government is most perplaxing. Some Unionists forecast a Unionist and Liberal coalition against the Bill, which, legitimate functions. if not withdrawn, may be passed by a small majority only, justifying its rejection by the House of Lords and the DETAILS OF THE DISCUSSION. consequent downfall of the Government.

UNIONISTS READY.

The Daily Mail says that if the Government are defeated the Unionists are prepared to take up office and a general election will follow immediately, As a result the Liberal papers admitthal the position is fraught with peril the existence of the Government. They suggest that the situation may be saved by the Government accepting the 5/and 2/- minima and defizite safeguards. against slackening, but they do not disguise their fears that the re-appearance of Mr Ballour means that the House Lords will be directed to reject the Bill making a constitutional crisis inevitable.

KING REEPS IN TOUCH.

The King has postponed his visit to Dartmouth and will remain in London in close touch with the situation.

MINISTERIALIST REFUSED HEARING.

Sir Rufus Isaacs, when speaking on at Hoxton, was howled down.

STRIKE TO CONTI-UE.

The instructions of the Miners Federation to the districts indicate that in the best circumstances the strike will tinue at least a fortnight.

A GENTLE REMINDER.

A prominent leader is quoted as saying that they have reminded the Government that sixty-six Radical seats, including those of seven Ministers, depended upon the goodwill of the Federation.

MR BALFOUR'S RE-APPEARANCE.

Mr Balfour's dramatic re-sppearance has added a political crisis to the industrial crisis. It was decided on at a meeting of Unionists, including Mr. Bonar Law, Mr. Austen Chamberlain, Mr. Walter Long, and Mr. F. E. Smith, apparently after the resolution of the Miners' Fe deration, whose attitude was regarded as justifying the Opposition's contention that the Bill was now futile.

STRIKE DURATION.

Whatever the fate of the Minimum Wage Bill the question of the termination of the strike depends upon the Miners' Federation, whose resolution reby a Scoto-Welsh coalition, the majority being only twelve.

MR. BALFOURS INDICEMENT

London, March 22. Mr A. J. Balfour, speaking in the House of Commons in the course of the debate on the coal-mines bill, emphasized that no American trust had The coal-owners at their meeting ever misused its powers to paralyze LATEST NOVELS BY THE BEST trade as the miners' leaders had done. second reading of the Coal Mines bill Mr Balfour, who received another ovation on rising to speak, said that no one was satisfied with the proposed solution. The country had never faced such a crisis as this. He intimated that after the Opposition had tested the Government's method or the second reading, it would do its best to see that the Government's policy had a chance. He then moved the rejection of the billion broad grounds of national policy. Mr Ballour concluded by assuming that if the bill was defeated there could be no dissolution as they would not add the confusion of elections to the horrors of the strike.

Mr Asquith, in reply, said the Government could not allow people's industries to be starved. The bill was preliminary to any further steps that might be necessary, which God forbid. He cordially welcomed Mr. Balfour's speech as one worthy moved the rejection of the bill without making a practical suggestion the Government would have been bound to obtain a legislative declaration on the subject of the reasonableness of a minimum wage, subject to adequate esfe-guards. The speeches delivered by the miners representatives in Parliament indicated that they would support the second reading, but in committee would insist on the 5/- for men, 2/- for boys minima for adults and boys nonhewers: they would also like to see the hewers schedule included in the bill. It is understood that the Government may concede the first demand, but the second will be refused.
